STMicroelectronics Commitment to the RBA

As a member of the Responsible Business Alliance (RBA), formerly the Electronic Industry Citizenship Coalition (EICC), STMicroelectronics and its affiliated companies are committed to implementing the RBA Code of Conduct, including any future revisions, in all our business operations and our supply chain.

Since 2005, when ST joined the RBA, we have aligned our management systems, processes and tools to comply with the code, and progressively deployed the code to our suppliers and subcontractors with the aim of improving social, ethical, and environmental responsibility in the global electronics supply chain.

We use the reporting and auditing framework provided by the RBA to monitor our performance, completing the Self-Assessment Questionnaire (SAQ) for all our manufacturing sites, and conducting third party RBA audits, performed by RBA validated companies in our manufacturing sites. Upon request, we provide our customers with access to the results of our SAQs and audits, and share our Corrective Action Plans, either manually or through the RBA Online tool.

At ST we believe that adopting industry standards that are shared by our customers and supply chain, is the most effective way to create a homogenous framework and environment to sustain fair and safe working conditions. We expect our business partners to participate in this common effort, by either adopting the RBA code or recognizing code equivalence where appropriate.
